Return of General Adams

LOS PINOS, Col., via Del Norte, Nov. 1. General Adams and Count Danhoff have just arrived from White River. They succeeded in reaching Merritt's command, although it was attended with much difficulty, and came near costing them their lives. The troops had deployed and were advancing to recover the body of Lieutenant Weir, killed eleven days previous while out on a hunt. Two solitary horsemen advancing, a whole company was deployed to give them battle, as scouts had reported Adams and his escort of twenty-three Indians as over three hundred strong. The Indians, not pleased with the outlook, had retired to a safe distance, leaving General Adams and Count Danhoff alone. The officer chanced to see a flag of truce just as the troops had covered them for the fatal shot. It was a close call, General Adams and the count have had a rough time. They came back from White River, 200 miles, in four days, having traveled over mountain trails. The pluck and energy of General Adams and Count Danhoff are truly commendable. Men of less energy would have signally failed. General Adams is of the opinion that the affair will be amicably settled by the surrender of the guilty parties in accordance with the wishes of the interior department.

GENERAL NEWS.

Death of Senator Chandler.

CHICAGO, November 1. Senator Zachariah Chandler, of Michigan, was found dead in his bed at the Grand Pacific this morning. He had been speaking in Wisconsin; and last night addressed an immense audience at McCormick's Hall in this city, and spoke with unusual earnestness. After the meeting, when he and Senator Logan were sitting in his room engaged in conversation, Senator Chandler complained of indigestion. He has complained of distressing feeling while en route to the city with three gentlemen. Mr. Spaulding suggested that he remain over in the city until Saturday night, but he said business affairs required his attention at home and the order was given to have him called in the morning at 7 o'clock. His friends then bade him good night and left. That was the last time the Senator was seen alive. This morning when the officers called him there was no response, and upon repetition silence prevailed. The clerk effected an entrance through the transom and found the Senator was dead. The body was not quite cold, and a physician who was present decided that death occurred about three hours previous to the discovery. The face looked tranquil showing that death was painless. The coroner will hold an inquest. John B. Drake, telegrapher, sent President Hayes the intelligence this morning at 8 o'clock.

Dr. McVicker, who was immediately called, is of the opinion, from partial examination, that the death was the result of sudden congestion of the lungs, brought about by a cold, which was contracted at Janesville. The inquest will be held during the afternoon. The sorrow over the sad event is universal, and the flags are at half mast upon the Pacific and other buildings. The Tribune building also is in mourning. The republican central committee and federal officials, together with a portion of the congressional delegation from this state the Union Veteran Club, and the head of the county militia organizations, held an informal consultation at the Grand Pacific to tender the services of appropriate committees whenever the relatives of the deceased senator shall arrive from Michigan. The latter will probably be here during the afternoon by special train, and final arrangements cannot be made until their arrival. The speech of last night is pronounced by those who are familiar with the senator's campaigns as far the most vigorous and able of all his previous efforts. The following resolutions were presented at the republican headquarters this afternoon and unanimously adopted:

The western branch of the republican national committee, republican state central committee, Cook county central republican committee and republican campaign executive committee of Cook county, speaking on behalf and for the republicans of the northwest and of Illinois and of the county of Cook, recognizing in the sudden decease of Senator Chandler, of Michigan, the chairman of the national republican committee, a calamity, and have adopted the following preamble and resolutions: During a public career of over 30 years Senator Chandler has exhibited such splendid traits of patience and earnest manhood as to command the respect and challenge the admiration of the country. In his public career he pursued no end but the public good, and was inspired by no motive but an intense love of the whole country. He hated oppression wherever he found it, and counted no consequences in denouncing the oppressor. He never backed away a right and in government was satisfied with nothing short of absolute justice. He was a great man because he was a true man. His opinions bore the final test and are now upon the statute books and embodied in the organic law of the land. His intellectual and moral courage never quailed and his convictions and friendships were in his very nature—patriotic to the heart's core, and clear as his heart was pure. His public life was measured merely by his views of the public good. Wise in council and intrepid in action he was a great leader and man. He died full of honors and his last utterances were for an honest government and an undivided nation, therefore,

Resolved, That we deplore the decease of Senator Chandler as a great national bereavement and loss to the counsels of the republican party of the nation, which will be impossible to supply; that, treasuring his last patriotic appeals, no higher honor can be paid his fame and memory than following to the uttermost his wise and earnest counsel; that we tender to the family of the great senator our most sincere sympathy in their overshadowing affliction; that these resolutions, preamble, be engrossed and forwarded to the family and friends of the deceased senator.

Emblems of mourning are now on all public offices and shipping places. President Hayes, through Secretary Rogers, sends a dispatch that the announcement of the senator's death is received with a deep sense of the great loss the country has sustained.

NEWS AT CHANDLER'S HOME.

DETROIT, Nov. 1.—Shortly before 10 o'clock this morning a dispatch was received by "Ex-Gov. John J. Bigley from John B. Drake, of the Grand Pacific Hotel, Chicago, announcing that Senator Zachariah Chandler had been found dead in his bed at that hotel this morning. The astonishing and sorrowful news spread like wild fire and was at first generally doubted but the Drake dispatch was speedily confirmed by telegrams to Congressman Newbury and others, and the certainty was established of his sudden death. Great excitement followed the confirmation of the first reports and the bulleting of the news and flags of the city were at half mast and evidences of universal grief were manifested on every hand. When Mrs. Chandler came to understand the dreadful significance of the announcement she was overwhelmed with grief and has since been completely prostrated. Ex-Governor Baldwin, Congressman Newbury and others have made arrangements for the removal of the remains to this city by special train to-morrow. A number of prominent citizens leave for Chicago by a special car this evening to act as committee of escort. Arrangements for the funeral obsequies have not been made as yet, but services will probably be held on Wednesday next.

MEETING OF THE CITIZENS.

A meeting of the citizens was held at the Grand Pacific hotel at 3 p.m. to-day to arrange for the paying of proper respect to the late Senator Chandler. Gen. John A. Logan was called to the chair and Hon. F. W. Gilbert, assistant United States treasurer, was appointed secretary. Gen. Logan read the dispatch from Detroit announcing a special train with a committee of prominent citizens would leave that city to-night for Chicago to take charge of the remains. Thereupon a committee of escort of thirty citizens of Chicago with Gen. Logan as chairman was appointed. Amongst these are the three members of congress, representatives of the leading daily papers of Chicago, of the republican national committee, the young men's auxiliary, and veteran clubs.

The following proposition from Gen. Terence, commander of the first brigade, national guards, was accepted:

Hon. JOHN A. LOGAN:

SIR: The announcement of the death of Senator Zachariah Chandler was a sudden shock. Sympathizing with the family and friends as a token of the sympathy on the part of the Illinois national guards, personally allow me to tender you a detail from my command as an escort to his body when it may be decided to remove it from the city.

JAS. F. TORRENCE, Brig. Gen. Command'g.

The militia will act as a guard of honor from the hotel to the train which will run as a special over the Michigan Central railroad, leaving here at 9 o'clock a.m.

PRESIDENT HAYES' ORDERS.

The following executive order has been issued:

EXECUTIVE MANSION WASHINGTON,

November 1, 1879.

The sad intelligence of the death of Zachariah Chandler, late secretary of the interior and during so many years senator from Michigan, has been communicated to the government and country, and in proper respect to his memory I issue an order that the several executive departments be closed to public business, and the flags of their dependencies throughout the country be displayed at half-mast on the day of his funeral.

R. B. HAYES,

[Signed]

THE NEWS IN NEW YORK.

New York, November 1. The news of the death of Senator Chandler reached the headquarters of the republican state central committee at a time when the room was filled with republican leaders from the city, and as might be expected, the sad intelligence created a profound impression. The Michigan Senator while in this city two weeks ago was a frequent visitor to the rooms, and became personally acquainted with all the members who learned to admire and love him for his warm heartedness and sterling qualities. Secretary Johnson said the Senator's death is a fearful blow to the republican party, which can ill afford to lose such a man at this time. Suitable action will be taken by the committee and the republicans of this city to Mr. Chandler's death soon. The news of the Senator's death created almost as profound a sensation at the rooms of the democratic committee. The majority, while opposed to the principles of Old Zack, admire his pluck and backbone.

WHAT A DEMOCRATIC PAPER SAYS.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., Nov. 1. At a meeting of the citizens to take action relative to Senator Chandler's death, resolutions appropriate for the event were adopted. In an obituary notice of considerable length, which will appear in the State Register to-morrow, Governor Palmer says the Register is willing to believe that his error of action arose from a mistake as to the theory of our government and that his stern opposition to the unity and fraternity of the people north and south was the result of honor and conviction. In public Mr. Chandler was honest and was never charged with using political positions for private gain.

FURTHER PARTICULARS.

CHICAGO, November 1. The last words of Senator Chandler were spoken at 11:30 last night to his friend Jesse Spaulding. He said upon bidding him good night, well Mr. Spaulding it is over too, after I have delivered a speech in Detroit Monday night I shall be through. We have had a pleasant trip together and met a great many pleasant and prominent gentlemen and hope before long we shall see each other again. Good night.

The coroner's inquest was held at the Grand Pacific to-night and after considerable evidence had been taken the following verdict was rendered:

That Zachariah Chandler, now lying dead at the Grand Pacific Hotel in the city of Chicago, county of Cook, and state of Illinois, came to his death on the first day of November, A. D. 1879, at the Grand Pacific hotel in said city of Chicago after midnight and before seven o'clock in the morning from a natural cause, which from the evidence we find to be cerebral hemorrhage.

The friends and relatives of the deceased objected to a post mortem examination and the body has been placed in a suitable casket and orders given for embalming.

Leonard W. Volk, the sculptor, took a cast of the head this afternoon, which he states is one of the best he ever made, it being a cast of the entire head instead of the face as is usual. More reports received from points in the northwest to-night state meetings and resolutions of respect to the dead senator and condolence to family and friends.

DEEP SORROW AT WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, November 1. The news of the death of Senator Chandler has called forth universal expressions of regret among the officers of the government, and is received with great sorrow by a very large proportion of the citizens of Washington irrespective of politics. His long residence in the city and kindness of disposition had gained him very many warm friends among all classes. Secretary Schurz, on hearing of the death of his predecessor, caused the interior department to be placed at half-mast and ordered the building to be draped in mourning. The president spent this evening a telegram of sympathy to Mrs. Chandler.

The Reception of Grant at Omaha.

OMAHA, Nov. 1. The morning opened bleak and dreary with a high wind blowing and clouds of dust. About 10 o'clock the wind subsided for a time and the sun came out from behind the clouds for a brief period as if to grace the occasion with his special presence, and the streets looked bright and gay in its reflection from thousands of flags which floated from the business houses and buildings. Every train brought in thousands of spectators while the roads were crowded with vehicles of every description bearing hundreds of farmers and their families into the city.

General Grant and party arrived at precisely 2:15 o'clock this afternoon, and by the time the various organizations formed in line, great crowds collected on every corner and thousands lined the sidewalks and house-tops and filled every window on the street, through which the line of march was to be taken. The afternoon was observed as a general holiday and with one accord the various institutions of industry, banks and many of the business houses closed doors in honor of the occasion, and added hundreds of employees to throng the spectators. The workmen followed a large part of those who engaged in the procession and among them were many who had fought under the great chief.

A salute was fired by the artillery stationed on the hill near St. Joseph's hospital announcing the approach of the special train having on board General Grant and party. In an instant afterwards the various church and fire bells all over the city began ringing out chimes, and steam whistles of all manufactures and locomotives rent the air with shrill shrieks and every hand the wildest enthusiasm prevailed. The immense crowd that had assembled at the Union Pacific depot were on a tip top of expectation from the time the firing of the signal salute until the train pulled in the depot. The train consisted of six engine, baggage car, passenger coach and two Pullman sleepers. The engine coach was elegantly decorated with flags and bunting. General Grant and party occupied one of the Pullman sleepers, and the Omaha escort of the grand army of the republic occupied the other.

His escort met the General at Cheyenne yesterday, having left Omaha on Thursday for that purpose. After leaving Pine Bluffs General Grant visited the escort in the car and was introduced in a neat speech by General M. Anderson and stayed an hour. Conversation and singing whittled the time away. After supper at Sidney a camp fire was held in the sleeper. Speeches were made by everybody and a long one by General Grant. At Grand Island the party was increased by a delegation of state officers and prominent citizens of Omaha who left there last evening. At every station along the line enthusiastic demonstrations were made by the immense crowds assembled to greet America's most distinguished citizen. It was a grand welcome all along the line terminating at Omaha this afternoon in the greatest ovation ever witnessed.

A few minutes after the firing of signals of salute the train pulled into the Union Pacific depot. The people went wild with the excitement in their welcome of the hero. The bands played several patriotic airs during the interval of waiting and while several organizations were being formed into a line on Third street by the grand marshals of the day. As soon as Gen. Grant entered the carriage in company with Gen. Crook, Gov. Nance and Mayor Chase, the column took up the line of march through the principal streets to Capitol Hill where a platform had been erected on the High School grounds. Here Gov. Nance made a brief speech of welcome followed by Mayor Chase who introduced Gen. Grant amid the enthusiastic applause.

General Grant spoke for about five minutes, saying that he was glad to put his foot once more on the American soil, after such a long absence. He had been cordially received everywhere as the representative of the American people who are appreciated by foreign nations more than we appreciate ourselves. Upon the conclusion of his remarks, the procession reformed and marched to Farnham street where General Grant reviewed the regular troops, state militia, fire companies, etc. The handshaking reception then took place at the court-house and postoffice building. The day concluded with the grand banquet at the Withnell house. General Grant and wife remain here over Sunday, the guests of General Crook and wife at Fort Omaha. They will attend services to-morrow at the First M. E. church.

U. S. vs. Tilden.

NEW YORK, November 1. The examination of DeBorne in the suit brought by the government against Saml J. Tilden for arrears of income was continued to-day. Judge Cabot before whom the question of production of books is pending gave a decision that the witnesses to produce his books as they were only required to refresh his memory. The case was then resumed before the U. S. commissioner and the witness said his firm had some transactions with Mr. Tilden, the nature and extent he did not know. The witness was questioned at length as to what they were and replied that he had no recollection or impression about them and could not answer the question.

The Lingerer Goes Home.

MEMPHIS, November 1. No new cases have been reported since Thursday. Last night was the coldest of the season. The thermometer at 7 o'clock this morning had fallen to 37. The Appeal and Avalanche will both resume the publication of full size issues to-morrow. Merchants report a rash of business and physicians all agree that the cold winds of last night swept away all lingering germs of the fever.

Wool Marks.

BOSTON, November 1.—The past week has been the most active on record, the total sales reaching 6,719,300 pounds, of which 1,181,500 pounds were foreign. The prices of nearly all kinds advanced from 2 to 3 cents per pound, and the tendency of the market is still decidedly upward. It is doubtful if any considerable amount of wool could now be bought without leading to another advance of about 2 cents, notwithstanding the large transactions. There is no unusual excitement on the market. There is more or less speculative inquiry, but the bulk of the sales have been to manufacturers, who are free purchasers of all desirable wools.

Arrangements for Hooker's Funeral.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1. The funeral of Gen. Hooker will take place here Wednesday. The remains will be buried in Cincinnati, Ohio.

A meeting of territorial pioneers of California is called for Monday next on the death of Hooker, who is a member.

The governor's room city hall has been set apart by the aldermen for the purpose of having the remains of Hooker lie in state.

Coinage for the Month.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1. The coinage at the mints during October was as follows:

Gold double eagles $63,823; gold eagles $118,000; gold half eagles $232,078. Total $413,901.

Silver dollars $2,372,100; silver half dollars $100; silver quarters $100; silver dimes $100. Total $2,572,400.

The minor coinage five cents $100; three cents $100; cents $921,100; total minor coinage $921,100; total coinage $3,907,601. Value $6,198,254.

Big Snake Killed While Resisting the Law.

WASHINGTON, November 1. Some time ago a report was received by Commissioner Hoyt from the Ponca reservation in the Indian territory that Big Snake, chief of the Poncas, was threatening to kill the agent, who last summer caused his arrest and imprisonment for one month for disorderly conduct, making himself a terror to the Indians as well as the agents. His arrest was ordered, and a detachment of soldiers from Fort Reno were employed to effect it. Big Snake, resisting the arrest, was shot dead by a soldier. The occurrence caused considerable excitement among the Indians, but it was quieted.

Declines.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 1. James Gillespie declines the republican nomination for the office of Lieutenant Governor, health and business positively forbidding his acceptance. Gillespie says without a free vote and a fair count the name of Gen. Washington himself would avail nothing.

TELEGRAPHIC BREVITIES.

The Pennsylvania R. R. company announces a semi-annual dividend of 2½ cents.

Fifteen steamships from European ports are overdue at New York, doubtless owing to prevailing northwest winds.

The Nevada bank has decided to reduce the capital from $10,000,000 to $3,000,000. The reason assigned is excessive taxation.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

The debt statement to-day shows the decrease of the debt for October to be $10,352,906.63.

Cash in the treasury, $229,844,811.

Gold certificates, $14,591,000.

Silver certificates, $6,135,850.

The name of "Fighting Joe Hooker" is added to the long list of brave union soldiers like Thomas, Meade, and Custer that have passed away.

The News has joined in the Chaffee boom. This is likely to kill it if nothing else. It will be remembered that the News' advocacy of Chaffee for the senate in January last, defeated him.

The attack on General Adams' reliability as a witness in Indian affairs has temporarily ceased. If he wants peace though he must not tell the truth, if it should be palatable to the prospective-war party.

The News cannot divert attention from the serious row in its own camp by raising up phantoms of republican rows. The Democrat and Epoch are bitter and represent a respectable minority of the democratic party that cannot be silenced.

Most people despise a rich or powerful man who will take an unfair advantage of a poor or weak one. We entertain similar feelings toward a government which would use its strength to take an unjust advantage of a weaker nation.

If the government does not remove the Indians it is the duty of the state to drive them out.

A state right is the right to regulate our internal affairs in our own way. Denver News.

The above paragraphs show the tendency of the "free for all" extermination party. The question of state rights is likely to be an issue next year, and our republican governor and his counselors must be careful or they will compromise the party on this question. State rights is no worse a doctrine in South Carolina than it is in Colorado.

The following interesting bit of history comes from the New York World which should be remembered is democratic.

"With Grant and Hancock as candidates there will be a chance for history to repeat itself. In 1851 Mr. Seward was the Conkling of New York. He had been antagonistic to the administration, but in the safe campaign not only did the cabinet submit to his dictatorship, but all of his state opponents, having a few scratches, fell into his line. That year it happened also that the New York democracy was divided. In 1852, the year that Secretary Sherman first figured in politics, Seward put forward for the presidency a military hero, General Scott, precisely as Conkling proposes to put forward Grant. Franklin Pierce, a general of lower rank than Scott, was pitted against him. Pierce carried every state but four, and the military hero sank into the obscurity of private life. There is talk already of holding the democratic convention in Cincinnati. It was there that the convention met that nominated Buchanan. For twelve years before that the Pennsylvania delegation had been disunited at national conventions, as it has been since 1868. In 1856, as this year, a Pennsylvanian's name was suggested for the nomination. The state factions allied together under that name as they are doing under Hancock's, and the convention's nominee became the next president."

As the Republican has begun to read the civil service order it may learn something in regard to the President's position. It makes the following quotations and comments to show that "Hayes has gone back on his civil service order."

"No assessment for political purposes on officers or subordinates should be allowed." That part of the order is a dead letter.

"No officer should be allowed or permitted to take part in the management of political organizations, caucuses, conventions or election campaigns." Read that over carefully. "Should not be permitted to take part in the management of political campaigns." How does that read, in the light of the fact that Sherman has just finished taking part in the Ohio contest? Every head of a cabinet or bureau has taken an active part in every close political contest since. We are not finding fault with this, but we approve the active participation of the best men in the nation in our politics. But that order shut them out. The president soon saw that it could not be enforced, and it never has been.

In regard to the first violation we can only contradict the Republican. President Hayes says office holders may contribute to political campaigns if they wish, but a republican committee shall not assess the contribution and compel the officer to pay. The distinction is plain and has been observed. In the days of Grant it was common to levy an assessment of 5 or ten per cent., and the United States paymaster deducted it from the pay and turned it into the committee.

As to the second violation the Republican is clearly in the wrong. In the order following the sentence quoted is the following: "Their right to vote and to express their views on public questions either orally or through the press is not denied provided it does not interfere with the discharge of their official duties." This is clear and simple. Secretary Sherman and others neglected their duties to speak. The Republican was hardly fair in leaving out the above sentence in the order. That violation is shown by the following extract from a letter written by Attorney-General Devens to the state committee of Massachusetts in October, 1877:

I learn with surprise and regret that any of the republican officials hesitate either to speak or vote, alleging as a reason the distinct terms that order states that the views on public questions, either orally or through the press, is not denied, provided of their official duties. If such gentlemen chose not to vote, or to express or enforce their views in support of the principles of the Republican party, either orally or otherwise, they, at least should give a reason for such a course which is not justified by perversion of it.

JUDGE BELFORD'S LETTER.
The letter written to the public by Judge Belford through Hon. Bela M. Hughes and published in the News is of considerable value. When Judge Belford appears in public, either by letter or on the forum, he never forgets the American eagle, nor omits to say something to tickle the popular ear, whether it is right or wrong. Save these defects the letter appears to us sensible. He has carefully collected a great many facts which have considerable value. Without making any reference to the allusions to the policy of the interior department, which are absurd, and the policy, and are intended only for sound, we will briefly indicate some of the good points.

The letter commences by stating the fundamental, obstinate and cruel fact in the whole controversy that the Indian must give way to the white man. He shows the great obstacles the Indians are to progress in this country. He demurs against 3,000,000 Indians holding and keeping idle 12,000,000 acres of land, or an area equal to that of Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Vermont and Delaware. Finally in conclusion he gives the following recommendations:

The constitution recognizes our right to petition congress for a redress of our grievances. This we ought to do. This winter if our petition is accorded all it is worth, when congress terminates its session the miners of this state can then determine for themselves whether our Indians shall own four thousand acres of our mineral land, or whether he (the miner) shall own ten. I have prepared and will offer on the first day of the session, if Colorado is called, a bill looking to the removal of the Utes, and work diligently to secure its passage.

Let us first make our appeal to congress, and failing in that we will choose our own course. I think Governor Pitkin's course must fail to act justly by us it will be time enough to call on him.

The above paragraph shows that Judge Belford is now an advocate of Secretary Schurz's policy. Last winter Secretary Schurz asked congress to give him authority to treat with the Utes and remove them from Colorado, but the request was not granted. Judge Belford's recommendation is the sensible one. We have all ways considered that the Utes must be removed, but contended that it must be done in a respectable, decent manner. This Judge Belford proposes to do, and we thank him for it. He shall have our heartiest support in his efforts.

As for the state doing what the nation fails to do, we would caution Judge Belford against making any threats. He may find himself in the ridiculous position in which Senator Teller found himself when he told the south that the people of Colorado would adopt the Mississippi plan under provocation. The amusing part of the letter is the indorsement of Governor Pitkin. It reminds us of his silver resolution in the republican convention, which made the party endorse what a few weeks ago he called an unqualified steal.

The governor wants all the Utes driven out immediately whether they deserve it or not. If they don't deserve it why then charges can be preferred against them in a language the Utes can hardly speak and cannot read. They will then be treated like the old criminal as told in song:

Yet such was the humanity
And wisdom of the law,
That, if in his indictment there
Appeared to be a flaw,
The court assigned him councilors
To argue on the doubt,
Provided he himself had first
Contended to point it out.
Yet lest their mildness should, perchance,
Be craftily abused,
To show him the indictment they
Most sturdily refused.
But still that he might understand
The nature of the charge,
The same was in the Latin tongue
Read out to him at large.

LITERARY NEWS.
The following interesting literary gossip is condensed from the New York World. In the rise of trade, which has taken the direction of exportation, the tide has at length begun to reach the publishers and to carry their books over the ocean.

Scribner's Monthly has been on every railway stall for some time, Lippincott's Magazine, the Atlantic and North American Review were not uncommon to be seen; now the effect is more generally felt. Harper's Latin Dictionary, only just published here, has received the imprimatur of Clarendon press at Oxford. Messrs.

Scribner have just concluded arrangements with an English house for the publication of the Huguenots, and also of Sidney Lanier's edition of Froissart for boys; the illustrations of which, by Mr. Alfred Kappes, deserve mention for their historical and artistic excellence. Messrs. Dutton have arranged for the publication of Phillips' sermons, Lippincott's for Mr. Bigelow's, Franklin and other publishers, the title of whose books would fill columns, have all had their books demanded for the English market. One of the most important announcements to be made is that of Messrs. Scribner, of the letters of Charles Dickens, edited by his daughter and his favorite sister-in-law, Miss Georgia Hogarth. About whom he quarrelled with his wife. This will consist chiefly of letters to his wife and family. None of them were used by Foster in his life. Messrs. Dodd & Mead, stimulated by the success of Lubke's "History of Art," have ventured on further fine art publications. One is a history of painting by Dr. Woltmann, edited by Professor Sidney Calvin Slade, professor of fine arts in Oxford, and who appears to be the rising young art critic of London. This like the Lubke will be profusely illustrated. The second art book is Mabury's "Print Collector," edited, revised and enlarged by Mr. R. M. Hoe, Jr., an enthusiastic and intelligent amateur. Mabury's book was published anonymously and in a limited edition about forty years ago and has long been a desideratum in the old book market. From the pleasant and agreeable style in which it conveys information it has always been a pleasure to those who were lucky enough to own it, and will be sure to swell the increasing army of American print collectors.

Another of Dodd & Mead's forthcoming books is "Shakespeare's Morals." Mr. Gilman groups in this book extracts from Shakespeare, and then by parallel groups from the English Bible and a number of other books he endeavors to show how Shakespeare was indebted to the Bible for his moral teachings. Mr. Worthington is also about to bring out a new edition of "Junius" for which, strangely enough, there is a constant and steady demand. Mr. James Miller is busy with old and new juveniles, which have this year formed an unusual proportion of the book and trade business. In addition to new editions of old favorites, he has new ones among which, noticeable, are "All Around My Rocking Chair" by Mrs. K. T. Wood, which is a large square quarto full of pleasing pictures, and written as a continuous story, with various anecdotes and poems produced. Mr. Miller will shortly publish illustrated fables by Mr. Albert Welles. The illustrations of this volume are noticeable, being photo-mechanical reproductions of pictures by Dore, Griset and Ridinger, who ranks as an "old master" among etchers. A book to attract attention and to be published by Mr. Miller is a new edition of "Blair's Grave," with the illustrations by William Blake, which have been so generally praised by Ruskin and other art critics, a curious point about the plates to this edition being that they have lain unprinted for thirty odd years and were engraved by Dick. In a similar style though smaller size, with Houghton, Osgood & Co.'s British Poets, Mr. Miller has brought out the supplementary series, also edited by Professor Child, of Harvard and formerly published by Little & Brown. Simultaneously with its appearance in France and England. Messrs. D. Appleton & Co. will before long publish the very interesting memoirs of Mme. de Remusat to come from the Appletons are "The Ministry of Health," a series of magazine articles and addresses by Dr. B. Richardson, best known to the public by his strenuous advocacy of "teetotalism" and his Utopian plan of "Hygeia, a City of Health," and also has a sounder reputation as a scientific physician. Two gift-books, made up from the Art Journal, will be "The Homes of America" and "Landscapes in American Poetry." The English houses in New York are in a peculiar position. They cannot say what they will publish here of the home house announcements until the books are received on account of the republishings of American publishers by arrangement or otherwise. Still, they generally have something new. In Cassell, Peter & Galpin's rooms are to be found proofs of part of a set of Dickens' lithographs, by J. Barnard, which they will shortly publish. Mr. Barnard will be remembered for his striking illustrations of Chapman & Hall's household edition of Dickens. They have also received earlier than was expected Prof. E. H. Plumptre's commentary on the Gospel of St. Matthew, edited by Bishop Elliott, and it comes apropos of the new seven-year series of International Sunday School Lessons which begins in January with St. Matthew. E. P. Dutton & Co. expect to receive the revised prayer-book as sanctioned by the bishops in the House of Convocation. Macmillan & Co. publish a third series of Freeman's "Historical Essays" and three new volumes in the Golden Treasury Series, one of which, "Shakespeare's Songs and Sonnets," edited by F. T. Palgrave, will be a volume of great interest from the unusual critical acumen which Mr. Palgrave shows in such work. The last volume of Masson's "Life of Milton" is announced, almost justifying Mr. Lowell's prediction of long ago as to the time in which it would be completed. Mr. Palgrave is announced as the author of a new child's story. Mr. Oliphant has produced another book, the title of which is the "Be-leaguered City." In art Macmillan & Co. announce a volume of essays on art and archaeology by Mr. C. T. Newion, of the British Museum.

RELIGIOUS NOTES.

The religious views of Hon. Alexander H. Stephens, of Georgia, may be understood from the following conversation with a correspondent of the Indianapolis Sentinel: "Correspondent: Mr. Stephens, I have long desired to know what your religious sentiments are, if you feel free to speak of them? Mr. Stephens: Certainly, sir. I am a member of the Presbyterian church, and have been since my boyhood days. They have never turned me out, and I have tried to live so that they could never have an occasion to do so. Cor. Mr. Stephens, what do you say of your faith now, that you are old and bending over the tomb? Mr. Stephens: I am trusting in the atonement of Christ for its cleansing efficacy. Cor. How does it look beyond the grave? Mr. Stephens: All is clear through the blood of the covenant. I hope there is nothing in the way."

G. W. SHARP, Agent.

The board of school trustees yesterday purchased lots 1 and 2, block 270, on South Cascade avenue, on which they will erect one of the primary school houses. The purchase was made through Capt. DeCoursey, real estate agent.

The dry goods establishment of Messrs. Ferris and Macklin presents an exceedingly handsome appearance. The new plate glass windows have been polished until they shine like mirrors, and there is a very artistic display of goods behind them.

There was a lively runaway yesterday. Result, smashed phaeton. There is an ordinance forbidding people to let their horses stand in the street without hitching. The ordinance is a dead letter, and the result is that horses run away and vehicles are destroyed.

The last day of October is a beautiful day. The sun pours out a flood of mellow light, and all nature looks subdued and calm. The leaves have assumed the serene, the trees are bare or baring, and a quiet solitude sits upon the face of nature.

Pueblo Democrat.

Mr. F. F. Hooker knows how to advertise, and what is as much to the purpose, the articles which he advertises are always first-class. His store is one of the newest in town and purchasers find it a pleasure to buy groceries of him. We would call special attention to the extensive advertisement in the business local column of this morning's GAZETTE.

The $50,000 school bonds recently voted by district No. 11 were yesterday sold at 92 1/2 per cent. They were purchased by Captain DeCoursey, as agent for other parties, and the price paid, when compared with the figures realized from our $50,000 water bonds, is an evidence of the increasing confidence felt in the future of Colorado Springs and vicinity. The building of the two much needed primary school houses will be commenced at once, and our people are to be congratulated upon the business tact of their board of school trustees and upon the acquisition of citizens like Captain DeCoursey, which have rendered such a result readily attainable.

PERSONAL.

Mr. John Potter leaves for a visit to the east to-day.

Mr. Channing Sweet went up to Denver last night on the southern express.

The Rev. Donald Fletcher, of Chicago, arrived in this city last Friday evening.

Mr. J. H. Woodgate has been appointed deputy collector of internal revenue, vice Walter Smith resigned.

Sheriff Smith returned from Canon City last night. He went down to escort the sentenced prisoners to their new quarters.

Major Macomber is in town having just come down from Leadville. He has bought property on Harrison avenue in that city and is thinking of putting in a stock of furniture. He will go east to-morrow on business.

County Commissioners.

There was a special meeting of the county commissioners yesterday. At this meeting Mr. B. F. Crowell presented his resignation of the office of treasurer, which was accepted, and Mr. John Potter, treasurer-elect was appointed to serve the remainder of Mr. Crowell's time.

The commissioners also allowed Sheriff Wooten, of Trinidad, $500, the reward given by El Paso county for the capture and conviction of a horse thief. Mr. Wooten was the man who arrested John Duff, alias Adolph Fleming, who was found guilty of grand larceny at the recent term of the district court. Sheriff Wooten desires us to express his thanks to the commissioners.

Ben Crowell.

The resignation of Ben Crowell of his office as treasurer of the county, which we announce in another place is one more of those events which sever the ties of old associations. Ben Crowell has been so long and so prominently connected with public duties in El Paso county that his absence will be keenly felt. Perhaps no man in the county is so popular as Ben Crowell and certainly his genial and obliging disposition give him a claim upon popular approval.

As an officer of the county he has been upright, scrupulously honest, watchful of the interests of the people, ready to do a kind act, diligent in his business and thus he has won an enviable place in the esteem of the community. He is now a bonanza king, but nobody can say that he is changed by his prosperity, or that he is other than honest, genial Ben Crowell.

ALL QUIET IN THE QUINJON

So far as the Indians are concerned, but dishonest white men are making trouble.

F. A. Higgins, correspondent of the GAZETTE.

RUBY CAMP, October 24th.

In my last I predicted we had seen the last of the Indian scare. Since then all appear to have become satisfied that we will not be molested this year, and all are again at work opening their mines, building cabins, etc., as though there had been no scare. In the whole camp I believe there were but two of us who paid no attention to the rumors circulated, and worked steadily on. All others of those who remained lost more or less time and many are now hard pushed to get fixed up for winter before winter sets in.

For two weeks we have been without any regular mail. During this time I have received but four numbers of the GAZETTE. For the same length of time no supplies of any kind were brought in, and in consequence should winter set in soon, many must needs run short of "grub" before spring, all owing to the needless and causeless Indian scare, so far as this camp was concerned. We learned yesterday that the governor had honored the requisition sent him for arms for this camp some three weeks ago, and has sent one hundred stand. These, together with the stockade which has been built in town, should be sufficient to give a feeling of security against an attack, so long as there are no Indians seen, and prevent a repetition of the stampede of the early part of this month.

The only thing at present likely to ruffle the good feeling and sense of security in the camp, is the jumping of several claims belonging to Smith, Robinson and Wood, by one Christopher. These claims were among the first located in the camp, and were duly worked, surveyed and recorded. Christopher has, or thinks he has, discovered some technical flaw in the location of these claims, and has taken advantage of the absence of the owners. This, together with some like attempts made before, has aroused the miners' feelings on the matter, and toward him, which may end in his expulsion from the camp. He cannot obtain even a shadow of a rightful claim to the lodes.

A company has been incorporated by J. R. Stevens, of Crested Butte, to build a telegraph line from Leadville to that place. They think to have it completed by next June. If built it will without doubt be extended to J. W. W.

The Indian scare, interfered somewhat with the working of the wagon road from Crested Butte to this place, but it is yet hoped to have it completed this spring. Wagons are arriving daily by the Ohio creek road.

For the past eight days the weather has been clear and warm with every prospect of a continuance. The snow is nearly gone.

National Hotel Sold.

The arrangements were completed yesterday for the sale of the National Hotel, and the new proprietors took formal possession. Messrs. Curtis and Quereau, who are in charge of the management, and William Riddle and Son are in charge. These gentlemen are from Detroit, Ohio, and are men of enterprise and a thorough knowledge of the business in which they have embarked. We are glad to welcome them to our city and wish them abundant success in their enterprise.

Bibliographical Notes.

A week or two ago we announced that somebody had carried off the Bible belonging to the GAZETTE library. We anticipated words of sympathy from our newspaper brethren, but we were mistaken. Our loss was made the subject of unfeeling remarks and we copy a few of these to show how the matter was looked at by the editors.

The Colorado Springs GAZETTE has the following notice: "If the man who walked off with the Bible belonging to the GAZETTE editorial library will return it he will confer a favor." We consider that entirely too thin. Wasn't it a pack of cards?"

Leadville Reformer.

One result of the meeting of the Presbytery at Colorado Springs, was the looking up of Bibles in that city. The GAZETTE says some one has carried its Bible out of the office. Perhaps it is like the old lady who, finding only a page of the book in her house when the minister called, exclaimed that she "had no idea they were so near out of Bibles." Alamosa Independent.

The Colorado Springs GAZETTE has lost its Bible. Bible! What's that? Denver Tribune.

The Colorado Springs GAZETTE office has been robbed of a Bible. At least this is the story told in a recent issue of that paper. The editor warns the thief that within the shortest period of time that indispensable volume must be returned to his desk, from which it was taken. The fellow misses it so much that he hopes it will be returned. Of course he never uses it but now that it has been ruthlessly snatched away, he hastens to alarm his readers and lead them into the belief that it is necessary in his business. It is a very cute way of advertising his great goodness, and he may be forced to set his paste pot on a patent office report until the return of the repentant thief with the golden clasped book, Leadville Chronicle.

Some one has stolen the Colorado Springs GAZETTE, editorial Bible. We shall keep ours under lock and key hereafter, as its loss would precipitate upon us a moral recklessness fearful to contemplate. South Pueblo Banner.

UP AND DOWN THE STATE.

Items of Interest Gathered from Our Exchanges.

The Trinidad News has a new heading. Eggs are worth 75 cents a dozen in Ouray.

The Big Pittsburg is a Leadville mine, the ore from which assays as high as $1,500 to the ton.

On the Iron Hill, Leadville, a strike has been made on the Tucson mine at a depth of 530 feet. The vein shows a pay streak, and assays 620 ounces to the ton.

E. A. Eggstone, who has been confined in the county jail at Pueblo on a charge of murder at Rosita, has been released on a $5,000 bond. Messrs. Alonzo Rice, Scott and others, of Denver, being the bondsmen.

Mill runs from the South Side gold lode, on Lackawana Gulch, on the west side of the Red Mountain range, some twenty miles from Leadville, show forty-six and fifty-six dollars to the ton. The crevice is from fifteen to eighteen inches wide, containing quartz with free gold. The property is being developed, and a stamp mill will be put up in the spring.

The Delores News gives a three column account of a day's doings in the lively Rico camp. On the 27th ult. they had one "Scarface" Dan, a thief, before a citizens' committee and it was decided and done to escort him from the camp with a warning never to enter it again at his peril. On Sunday Sheriff Reilly sold the possessions of Dan to satisfy the demands of the person whom he robbed, these ceremonies being preceded by an open-air sermon by the Rev. H. P. Roberts, of Silverton. At the conclusion of the sermon, a public announcement was made of a horse race, for which a purse was made up during the divine services. The feeble rays of the setting sun saw a vast crowd, with plenty of money, betting on the race. Such is life in the far west.

A LEADVILLE LEGEND.

Being a Miner Melody Developing the Theme: The Merciful Man is Merciful to His Beast.

[For the Sunday Gazette.]
The quality of mercy is not strained,
Neither shall be the moral of three rhymes,
Whose teachings, doubtless, will be much discussed.

As morals are in these degenerate times.

The moral is—but that is not the way.

In spite of Horace with his medusæ res,
To tell a fable; the Leadville Legend
Does come last, so pardon if you please.

Pardon the ardor of your moralist,

Who fain would venture on the Q. E. D.
Before the demonstration reader, list!
I'll tell the tale as it was told to me.

The man who told it was a miner gray,
And bearded like the pard who sat with him

And handled ivory disks in sportive play.

Until he said: "I paraphrase it—'Dim!'"

Yes, "dim" was what he said when "dim" the luck."

You hadn't no feelin' pard or you'd stopp'd
My foolishness in tryin' fer to luck
Agin this game, my last spookmark's dropped.

Now, if you'd thought jist half as much o'
me

As Jake did of his burro, I'd a ben
A great deal better off, but now you see
I'm "broke," whereon he muttered "dim!"
again.

"What is a burro?" asked I with surprise,
"And who, I pray thee, was this person
Jake?"

The miner first disparaging my eyes,
I murmured "whiskey" on that hint he spoke.

THE MINER'S STORY.
Jake was a miner in this year's part
Of the camp, and he owned a burro,
An' burro's Spanish for jacks' smart!

You bet, but he suffered sorrow,
Jake did, not the jack, oh he's O. K.
But Jake was kind o' spooney

An' he died for a principle. Pards, I say
Ph'anthropists all is looney.

The jack was an actor, that's the way.
It happened, in Music Hall sir,
I would a made you cry for to hear him bray

In answerin' a recall sir.
He'd take the stage with a tragic stride
An' he played in the "Mountain Rover
Or the Bloody Blade of the Bandit's Bride."

An' he sized the troupe, way over,
The rest of the players, was mad, you bet,
Steam up all hot and sassin'

An' they hired some chaps, a rowdy set,
An' put them up for hussin'.

When the jack came on they hissed an' hissed,
Jake's heart was filled with sorrow,
He jumped on the stage an' shot—but missed,
Saying "gents this year's my burro."

An' I say to you may I be hanged
If I'll see him made a fool of!

Jest then a mountain bull-dog barked,
An' poor Jake began to cool off!

Dead? Keerret, an' the jack, O. K.
He left the stage, an' whether
He learned the foolishness of the play,
Or wanted to save his leather.

I can't just say, but I point with pride
To the fact that's known all over,
"The Bloody Blade of the Bandit's Bride"
He jumped "Or the Mountain Rover."

An' this is why I was led to say
My pard might have saved me sorrow,
If he'd tried to make me jump the play,
As poor Jake did with his burro.

MORAL.
The moral is—whatever you may please,
I will not snatch the fearful joy from thee,
Please search for it somewhere in medusæ res,
And when you find it mark it Q. E. D.

IMPORTANCE.

Super Phoenix Babylonis.

"The Sabbath day in this, our little city,
Is badly broken, and it is a pity!"
Said Mr. X. Said Jenkins, "you've betrayed it,
And like the flume, 'Squire Rogers must have made it."

When the waters of the river in the flume began to dance,
The people trembled as they murmured, "O,
we'd better go to France."

The flume fell down, all on a summer's day,
'Tis vain to seek the cause of its decay;
You'll surely find a Lyon in the way.

The Woods in October.

How brilliant the woods in October!
Like the nose of the man never sober!
Like the red of the juvenile mitten,
Or the coat of a calico kitten!

Like the variety hues of a nice dream,
Or the units of a harlequin ice cream;
Like changeful, e'er-changing mosaic,
With nothing stale, dull or prosaic,

But everywhere gleaming in splendor,
Like the sky in the west at day's end, or
The posters whose chains never irk us,
That tell of the forthcoming circus—
Like the nose of the man never sober,
How brilliant the woods in October!

The man who cheats the printer
Out of a single cent,
Will never reach the heavenly land
Where old Elijah went.

Polish Poet.

The Polish poet Krackevsky, who is of course an Austrian subject, being born in Cracow, has received great ovations from the public on the completion of fifty years since he published his first novel. Your correspondent met him at the opera last night. He is a distinguished, serious man of genius. He has published over four hundred volumes; and explained this astounding fact by saying that he worked half the night, and that although he felt nervous afterward he could not bring himself to a more reasonable mode of life. He looks older than his years, and no wonder, since one of his daughters, a beautiful girl, was carried off by the Russians to the mines of Siberia, to return, after fifteen years' exile, a broken down woman, to die in her father's arms. The old man is alone now and lives at Dresden, and still busy with his pen, writing to support his life, for he spent all his fortune in vain effort to free his daughter. To-morrow the Emperor is to receive him. Krackevsky being eager to thank the monarch for a high decoration that has been sent to him at Cracow. He told us that he had received so many presents within the past week that he will have to take a larger house in Dresden to be able to give them all room. All the young Poles living here are eager to be at the old man's side, and the one whom Krackevsky chose for a companion is Scimiersky, the young painter, who by his first picture won name and fame. It was exhibited here two years ago and took up an entire wall in our Künstlerhaus. The subject is an unpleasant one, but the young artist has known how to adorn it. It represents Nero and his court looking on while fire is being set to the houses of the unhappy Christians. Scimiersky, with a Pole's patriotism, which I believe to be equally only by an American's made a present of his picture; the labor of many years, to his native city, Cracow, well knowing that the Poles are too poor to buy anything so splendid. He has exhibited several good pictures since then, among the number "The Vendor of Amulets" and one of a Grecian slave dancing between swords stuck in the ground, and though but thirty-two years old, his name is already placed among those of the country's first artists. Vienna Correspondence of N. Y. World.

High Art in Handkerchiefs.

Some ladies at the Great Mountain have been etching on linen. It is a beautiful art and makes picturesque our napkins. Indeed I wiped my lips on the "interior of St. Paul's" yesterday, which one of our artists says is basely inartistic. But we do not care what he says so that our etchings come out well. We iron our linen and draw our etchings while it is still warm with a very delicate pen, then leave them for six hours in the sun, then return tremblingly. But they are generally very good, and for pretty draperies for the wash stand and for tidies, and indeed for delicate handkerchiefs and for all the great monogram business, it is a convenient art. Perhaps some of your readers may like to know the result of our experience. Have all linen washed before attempting to draw on it, to extract the dressing. Then apply a light preparation of gum to the place to be etched. This thoroughly dry and smoothly ironed, proceed to draw with a Harrison & Bradford pen, No. 170, and for fine lines Gillott's mapping pen, 291, or if you are not a sufficiently good draughtsman, to make your pictures out of hand, outline with a pencil first on the linen or draw it through carbon or transfer paper with an ivory point. Then take your pen, to which you must look for all expression and shading. Any indelible ink will do, but should be well shaken. Proceed as if etching with India ink on Bristol board, only be careful to keep the ink on the surface. The pen must not be pressed into the cloth. A broad line must be made by several strokes of the pen and not by one heavy one. The ferns, so beautiful even in the forest, half as white as ghosts, half yellow and half green, form lovely models for these etchings; although we lose their coloring the forms are beautiful. In washing this artistic linen be careful that only soap and water of the purest are used, for soda and "washing powder" ruin the color of the ink. This art comes in prettily in fan decoration. Every admirer of a young lady who can draw can change her common linen fan into a beautiful and rare "objet d'art," with a rapidly etched picture symbolical of their late summer experience—of picnics, boating or horseback riding, or still better, a lawn-tennis group with portraits of the best players, a very charming journal of visit to a country house, which may have led to important declarations and to some important final arrangements which shall last "while you both shall live." Boston Traveller.

Two Valuable Inventions.

The following new inventions by residents of Nevada have been patented at the Washington patent office:

A BARBER'S MUZZLER. This is a very serviceable contrivance, which can be fastened over a barber's mouth to prevent his talking while shaving customers. It is made of iron, padded inside and can be fastened securely so as to cover the whole mouth. It is furnished with clamps and screws which are fixed at the back of the head. Price, $2.50. Those furnished with a lever attachment for the purpose of breaking the barber's jaw come at $3. The plates which fit on the cheek are of the best chilled steel.

THE BONNET GRAPPLE. This little machine is destined to be of great service to theatre-goers. It is an ordinary grapple hook with a rope attached. The grapple is thrown over any lady's bonnet which may happen to obstruct the view, and the crowd behind can always be depended upon to pull the rope. It sometimes disfigures the lady's face permanently, in which case she never returns to again obstruct the view. Virginia (New) Chronicle.

A Day with Wagner.

Mr. Dutton Cook contributed to Belgravia an interesting chapter on the music of Wagner, with special reference to the work of the librettist. An extract is given from Roche's account of a day passed with the musician of the future, the former hammering out the words, the latter the music, which is worth reproducing: "He came," says Roche, "at seven in the morning; we were at work without rest or respite until midday. I was bent over my desk, writing, erasing, he was erect, pacing to and fro, bright of eye, vehement of gesture, striking the piano, shouting, singing, forever bidding me 'Go on! go on!' An hour, or even two hours, after noon, hungry and exhausted I let fall my pen. I was in a fainting state. 'What's the matter?' he asked. 'I am hungry.' 'True; I had forgotten all about that; let us have a hurried snack and go on again.' Night came and found us still at work. I was shattered, stupefied; my head burned, my temples throbbing. I was half mad with my wild search after strange words to fit the strange music. He was erect still, vigorous and fresh as when we commenced our task, walking up and down, striking his infernal piano, terrifying me at last, as I perceived dancing about me on every side of his eccentric shadow cast by the fantastic reflections of the lamp, and crying to me ever, 'Go on! go on!' while trumpeting in my ears cabalistic words and supernatural music."

The King of Beasts.

William Garhart denies Congressman Daggett's assertion that the mule is the king of beasts. Garhart accords the palm of superiority to the hog. A hog always knows what he is about. Garhart claims that no man on earth ever got the better of a hog in a fair struggle. He has tried to drive over hogs many times, but was successful only once. They sometimes lie in the hollow of the road fast asleep. Mr. Garhart has often been down on them at a 240 pace, with a five ton stage and a six-in-hand on a down grade. Just, however, as he confidently expected to see the air filled with wagon grease and spare ribs, they would lurk clear of the wheel, or glide under the stage and come out all safe and sound, with a grunt of quiet satisfaction, and a look that was more exasperating than to be robbed by road agents. Mr. Garhart never got away with a hog but once. The animal dodged a train of cars coming out of a tunnel, and he whipped up his horses and caught the hog square in the neck with the forewheels and killed it. The stage, however, upset, and smashed everything in sight. Two men were killed outright and several women maimed for life. The hog calculated all right for the locomotive, but was out of his reckoning on the stage. But the company thought the victory over the hog was dearly purchased. Garhart also asserts that a hog can whip a mule. Daggett's assertion to the contrary notwithstanding.

The Captor of Cabul.

Major General Sir Frederick Sleight Roberts, K. C. B., V. C., is one of the luckiest officers in the service, for while he has been Quartermaster-General and is a Major General in India, he is only a major in his regiment of artillery. He comes of a Waterford family. Three of the four sons of the Rev. John Roberts served their country in arms. Thomas dying a post-captain, Samuel, who fought all through the American war, attaining to the honor of knighthood and filling an important office in Ontario, and Abraham rising to be General and K. C. B. ere he died at the age of ninety. The captor of Cabul is the son of the last-named by a second wife. He entered the Bengal artillery in 1852 as a second lieutenant, and after acting as A. D. C. to his father, then commanding the Peshawar division, was transferred to the Quartermaster-General's Department. He went through the mutiny, being at Lucknow and Delhi, where he got the Victoria Cross for sabring a standard-bearer in the walls and taking his flag. He has ever since been on the staff, was Commissioner of the Punjab, was Quartermaster-General of India, went to Abyssinia with the Bengal Brigade as quartermaster, and commanded during the recent operations the Kurum Valley force. He has been mentioned twenty-three times in dispatches. Last spring he got into trouble with the English press by "muzzling" Mr. McPherson of the London Standard, whom he sent to the rear, appointing one of his aids to act for the journal. The correspondent's offense was commenting upon neglect to guard convoys and a wasting of time and men in an ignominious foray upon the Khost hill men. N. Y. World.

Gymnastic Diplomacy.

Cardinal Richelieu, we are told, spent his hour of relaxation in leaning over the furniture, and on one occasion he was discovered jumping with his servant to try which could reach the high side of a wall. De Grammont, knowing the Cardinal to be jealous of his powers, offered to jump him for a wager a proposal which shows the courage, as much as the event showed the diplomacy, of the courtier. The offer was accepted, but De Grammont took care that his legs should never quite reach those of his Eminence, and thus lost a few louis, but gained speed and high promotion by the favor of his triumphant and gratified opponent. Chamber's Journal.

Obituary Poets.

No more I clasp thee in my arms
Or nurse thy little head;
No more I'll watch thy gentle sleep,
For thou, my dear Celia, thou art dead.

Gently, gently blow, ye breezes,
O'er the grave where dear Celia lies;
'Tis for her heart is weeping,
'Tis for her father sighs.

A small boy looking at a picture of Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden asked his mother if they never wore more clothes than those in which they were represented, and being told that was all they wore, said: "I bet whatever did they do when people came to call?"

"Small girl very harshly, to a doll in a toy carriage, dolly having tumbled from the seat. "Sit right up, you horrid old thing! Don't you dare to do that again or I'll whip you." Seeing a passer who had approached unobserved she modified her voice and continued in dulcet tones: "Now sit up straight and be careful not to fall and hurt yourself."

I am counting by and by;
You will hear my plaintive cry,
In accents mild and gentle as a lamb;
Ere long I'll be on deck,
Bringing ninety cents a peck,
Sing hey! the sweet potato that I grow.

A Wife's Love That Stood the Test.

A very singular affair has just occurred in this city. A sewing machine agent by the name of Pendleton thought he would test the affections of his wife. He accordingly went to an upper story of his residence and opened the window. His residence and opened the window. He then tied a stout rope around his body and then tied a stout rope around his body under his arms, fastened one end to the thing in the room and stepped out of the window. He then made a noise which attracted his wife's attention. She came and beheld the perilous predicament which he was in. She felt the need of doing something at once to save her husband. In her excitement she seized a knife and cut the rope. The result was that he was precipitated some twenty-five feet to the ground beneath. Strange as it may appear, he escaped serious injury, but it will probably be a long time before he attempts a similar exploit. Bangor (Me.) Commercial.

Better than a Shot-Gun.

A merchant doing business near the foot of Jefferson avenue used to spend about half his time in explaining to callers why he could not sign petitions, lend small sums, buy books or invest in moonshine enterprises, but that time has passed, and it now takes him only two minutes to get rid of the most persistent case. Yesterday a man called to sell him a map of Michigan. He had scarcely made known his errand when the merchant put on his hat and said:

"Come along, and I'll see about it."

He led the way to a boiler-shop, two blocks distant, where a hundred hammers were pounding at iron, and, walking to the centre of the shop and into the midst of the deafening racket, he turned to the agent and kindly shouted:

"Now, then, if you know of any special reasons why I should purchase a map of Michigan, please state them at length."

The man with the maps went right out, without attempting to state "reasons the one," and the merchant tranquilly returned to his desk to await the next. Detroit Free Press.
